3,000 MINNEAPOLIS UNEMPLOYED FIGHT POLICE FOR TWO HOURS

GANDHI'S FULL SUPPORT FOR SWARAJ

Mahatma States His Policy.

CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE TO BE ABANDONED

Patna, Yesterday.
Mahatma Gandhi urged the abandonment of Civil Disobedience in the course of a statement to the Press, to-day.

"I must advise all Congressmen to suspend civil resistance for the Swaraj as distinguished from specific grievances," he said.

He added that he had decided to be, himself, the sole civil resister.

Gandhi's announcement, in conjunction with his approval of the decision of the congress leaders to contest the forthcoming elections for the Legislative Assembly, and to revive the Swaraj Party for this reason, is interpreted that Gandhi is abandoning his policy of non-co-operation and devoting all his energies to the attainment of the Swaraj.—Reuter.

PROMOTING STUDY OF BUDDHISM.

University At Sarnath To Be Established.

Lucknow, Yesterday.
It has been decided to establish an international Buddhist University at Sarnath, near Benares, where Buddha himself conducted a monastery.

The university, is intended to promote the study of Buddhism and "scientific subjects" having the greatest bearing on the good of humanity.—Reuter.

SIAMESE RULER IN FRANCE.

Leaving Soon For Long Stay In London.

Paris, Yesterday.
The official visit of Their Majesties, the King and Queen of Siam ended to-day after a luncheon given by Their Majesties at the Siamese Legation in honour of the French President, M. Albert Lebrun and Mme. Lebrun.

The function was attended by the Premier, M. Gaston Doumergue, Mme. Doumergue, and M. Herriot.

Their Majesties are remaining for another 10 days, incognito, and will then proceed to London where they will stay for five weeks.

The King intends to visit a dentist.—Reuter.

BIG ADVANCE IN LONDON PRICE OF TIN
London, Yesterday.
The price of tin on the London exchange yesterday advanced 92/6d. to £243/17/6d. per ton, being the highest price recorded since January, 1928.—British Wireless Service.

FORTY FEARED DROWNED IN NORWEGIAN FJORD TRAGEDY

Gigantic Waves Caused By Fall Of Huge Crag

Oslo, Norway, Yesterday.
Forty persons are missing and believed to be drowned as the result of great waves sweeping up the Ta Fjord, near Allesund, to-day.

The waves were caused by a huge crag, overhanging the Fjord, falling into the sea. One wave travelled nearly half a mile inland, wrecking six houses.—Reuter.

OIL RESTRICTION CONTEMPLATED

London Conference?

SIGNIFICANT DEPARTURES OF U.S. MAGNATES

New York, Yesterday.
An important oil conference in Europe, with the object of balancing supply and demand, is stated by American newspapers to be the object of the departure, during the past few days, of several prominent oil magnates.

The latest departure is Mr. Walter Clark Teagle, President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, who professes ignorance of any conference.

Before leaving he declared that he was going to Europe purely for company reasons.—Reuter.

GERMAN GENERAL PASSES.

Directed Attack On Leige.

Berlin, Yesterday.
The death occurred to-day of General Karl von Einem, who commanded the Seventh Army Corps in the early days of the War.

He directed the attack on Leige and was later Commander-in-Chief of the Third Army.

He fought throughout the War, finally conducting the German troops home across the Rhine at the conclusion of the Armistice.—Reuter.

JAPANESE TRAWLER DISASTER.

Bodies Found Near Shantung.

Dairen, Yesterday.
The Dairen trawler, Shoyei Maru, which has been missing since late in March, has been given as lost following the discovery of dead seamen and lifebuoys off Shantung Promontory, which they were fishing.—Reuter.

CLAIMS BRITISH NATIONALITY.

Insull's Last Bid To Escape U.S. Law.

Istanbul, Yesterday.
As a last bid for freedom, the former American utilities magnate, Mr. Samuel Insull, who was arrested here last Sunday for extradition to the United States, is exchanging telegrams with his London lawyer, in the hope of establishing a claim to British nationality and securing the British Government's intervention.—Reuter.

LABOUR UNREST IN AMERICA

RESTORATION OF C.W.A. DEMANDED

RENEWED THREAT OF STRIKES IN AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRIES

MINNEAPOLIS, YESTERDAY

FIERCE FIGHTING BETWEEN 3,000 UNEMPLOYED AND THE POLICE, TOOK PLACE OUTSIDE THE CITY HALL HERE, TO-DAY. THE RIOTERS, WHO SHOUTED "WE WANT BREAD AND WORK," ARE DEMANDING THE RESTORATION OF THE DISBANDED CIVIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION, THE ABOLITION OF WHICH THREATENS TO THROW HUNDREDS OUT OF WORK.

The Chief of Police threatened to call out the National Guard after two hours of fighting in which the Police, assisted by firemen, battled furiously with the mob. The rioters seized tear-gas bombs and hurled them at the Police. Four policemen were injured and 20 rioters arrested.—Reuter.

New York, Yesterday.

Simmering labour unrest in America is keeping the hands of the peace-makers full, particularly in the automobile industry and cognate industries.

Unrest rules in Detroit where President Roosevelt's intervention recently settled a strike. The Unionists assert that the employers are still pressing employees to join company Unions.

STOCK EXCHANGE CONTROL BILL.

Washington, Yesterday.

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday unanimously passed an amendment to the Stock Exchange Control Bill, excluding small exchanges from the regulation.

Spokesmen of both the House of Representatives Sub-Committee and the Senate Bank Committee forecast further quick action, making it virtually certain that the Bill reach both Houses next week.

There are strong indications that the question of fixed marginal requirements which comes up on Monday, will be left to the Federal Reserve Board.—Reuter.

HIGHER PRICE FOR STEEL.

25 Cents Rise In Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, To-day.
The price of scrap steel has advanced by 25 cents.—United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

LONDON SILVER MARKET.

Slight Decline In Prices.

London, Yesterday.
London silver prices to-day were down one-sixteenth as follows:—
April 6 April 7
Spot ..... 20 19-15/16
Forward ..... 20-1/16 20

The London on New York cross-rate at closing to-day was $-U.S. 5.17-1/16, as compared with $-U.S. 5.15-7/8 at yesterday's closing.

Our Own Correspondent.

Tool-makers, whose strike last Autumn impeded automobile production, threaten to strike next week failing satisfaction of their demands, including a 20 per cent. wage increase and a 36-hour week.

Several thousand workers in the Motor Products Tool Company, at Detroit, struck yesterday, but a settlement of the differences is likely to be reached to-day.

On the other hand, the Automobile Labour Board at Racine, Wisconsin, settled a strike which has kept nearly 5,000 workers idle for six weeks, involving the Nash Motor Company and the Seaman Body Corporation, whose workers were aggrieved over alleged discrimination between Union members and non-Unionists.

They also demanded a 10 per cent. increase in wages.—Reuter.

EMERGENCY TAX IN AMERICA.

Provision For Extra 10 Per Cent.

Washington, Yesterday.
The Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator Harrison, yesterday said that the Committee had agreed on a one-year emergency provision adding 10 per cent. to the amount of every tax return.—United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

TIBETIAN MISSION BOMBSHELL.

Delegation To Nanking Not Official.

Nanking, Yesterday.
The latest bombshell in Tibetan affairs has been exploded by the announcement at the local office of the Tibetan Government that the delegation from Tibet was not sent by the Tibetan Government, and was entrusted with no mission to welcome the Panchen Lama to return to Tibet.—Reuter.

Fraulein Rita Georg, the Viennese musical comedy actress, accompanied by her lawyer, M. Joseph Blenck, after her examination by the magistrates who are investigating the Stavisky scandal, in Paris. Fraulein Georg, for whom Stavisky, financed a stage production in Paris, said that she had received a warning that she might meet the same fate as the Russian swindler if she remained in Paris.—(S. & G.)

SOVIET AVIATORS RELEASED

Month's Detention By Manchukuo.

INTERNATIONAL FRICTION AVOIDED

Changchun, Yesterday.

The two Russian aviators who made a forced landing in the Mishan district, Manchukuo, on March 11, have been released by the Manchukuo authorities.

The whereabouts of the men, however, are being kept strictly secret.—Reuter.

Following their landing, the two pilots were detained on suspicion of reconnoitering foreign territory, and demands from Moscow for their release were refused by Manchukuo.

The Court of Inquiry formed to investigate the matter, however, on Friday found that the men voluntarily flew into Manchukuo territory in order to escape from the persecution of the O.G.P.U., the Soviet secret police. They would be treated as political offenders and would not be deported, as the Soviet authorities demand.

CHINA COASTER MYSTERY

Distress Signals, Then Silence.

"YUEN SHWUN" IN DIFFICULTIES

Shanghai, Yesterday.
Anxiety has been aroused by the silence of the China Coaster "Yuen Shwun," which sent out signals of distress this afternoon, when near Ningpo, but failed to reply in response to other vessels.

The "Yuen Shwun" left Chefoo on Wednesday, with 1,000 tons of cargo. The number of people aboard is unknown.

The vessel is owned by a Chinese company at Newchwang.—Reuter.

WEATHER REPORT

Fair weather, with moderate to fresh east winds was the weather forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory last night.

SANTA FE RAILWAY REVENUES AGAIN DECLINE

Company's Expressed Optimism For 1934

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 7, 8.30 a.m.)

Topeka, Kansas, Yesterday.
The annual report of Santa Fe Railway issued yesterday, shows that the net income for 1933 was U.S.$16,502,300.

For the fourth consecutive year, revenues have failed to exceed those of the preceding year. The President, Mr. Bledsoe, said U.S.$20,349,320.

The President, Mr. Bledsoe, said he was optimistic for 1934.—United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

AIR SERVICES IN BRITAIN

Fast Communication In The North.

LIVERPOOL AERODROME OPENED BY PREMIER

New Service Inaugurated

London, Yesterday.

Although the weather was unfavourable for flying, and snow storms were reported in the mid-land areas, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Prime Minister, flew yesterday to Liverpool to open a new aerodrome near that city.

He was accompanied by the Air Minister, Lord Londonderry, and both Ministers were guests of the Lord Mayor at a civic luncheon.

The visit marked the inauguration of the new Liverpool-Glasgow-Belfast-Liverpool-Birmingham Air Line Service.

The projected extension of the scheme will link Liverpool, through Heybridge, a new airport in Essex, with the Continent.

London, Yesterday.

Sir Henry Walford Davies has been appointed Master of Music to His Majesty King George V. in succession to the late Sir Edward Elgar.—British Wireless Service.

A POPULAR BUDGET

RESTORING 1931 ECONOMY CUTS IN BRITAIN

SURPLUS DISPOSAL PREDICTED.

BENEFITS FOR BOTH TAXPAYER AND UNEMPLOYED

London, Yesterday.

The prospects of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, producing a popular Budget with his £31,147,860. surplus, on April 17, are growing in well-informed quarters.

It is understood that the Chancellor again will not make any provision for war debt payment to the United States, leaving a substantial surplus for disposal.

It is generally anticipated that Mr. Chamberlain will reduce the standard rate of income-tax by sixpence and also restore the economy cuts made in 1931.

He is expected to be in a position to restore the unemployment benefit level to where it stood before the financial crisis, and to increase the allowance for dependent children under the Unemployment Bill from two to three shillings weekly.

It is estimated that the two latter concessions will cost over £7,000,000.

The Chancellor may give relief to the entertainment industry by removing the tax on lower-priced seats.—Reuter.

VIENNA REVOLT ECHO.

Prison Governor And Warders Arrested.

PRISONERS' ESCAPE SEQUEL

Linz, Yesterday.

The Governor and three head-warders at the prison here have been arrested in connection with the escape of four prominent Socialists and two Nazis from the prison, last Monday night and placed under a heavy military guard.

Herr Bernaschek, the leader of the Linz Socialists, who is alleged to have been responsible for the recent uprising, is among those who escaped.—Reuter.

COST OF COMPLYING WITH N.R.A.

Compensation For Contractors.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 7, 9.45 a.m.)

Washington, Yesterday.
The United States Treasury Secretary, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, yesterday asked Congress to enact legislation to reimburse Government contractors for increased costs incurred as the result of complying with the National Recovery Act provisions.—United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

Short Story.

FACE VALUE

By Dale Collins.

THE crescent of beach, white as the new moon and as barren of life, bought a frown to Paterson's brow. What had become of the people of Taruka? The Government cutter in the offing—the District Officer coming ashore in his dinghy—these were intrusions on the sun-drenched life of the island which always gathered the three white men and the brown folk in a well-coming guard of honour. To-day only the battalions of the palms stood there, still and languid under the pregnant, sombre thunder-clouds.

Crabs scuttled away as the dinghy grounded and the crew sprang out to run her up the beach. A razor-backed hog rooting at the base of a palm raised a long snout in inquiry. The absence of human greeting alarmed the boat-boys. They shuffled uneasily, casting side glances at the master.

"Stand by, there," he ordered, and crunched away up the bank of powdered coral.

The trader's house appeared ahead. The thatched place raised on short piles looked as uninhabited as the rest. Where was old Tim Downey? Why didn't he come grumbling out? Up the steps he went in two bounds, but, on reaching the veranda, stopped with a jerk. Flung forward in mid-stride, he stared in blank surprise at Tim Downey, who lay on a canvas bed, a rifle cuddled to him. Tim Downey but a different man. He was no longer the red bladder of humanity. The flesh had dried off his skull, and his big body had wasted away. A blue bruise scarred his brow, fever burned in his sunken eyes and his lips were dry and cracked.

"Tim—?"

"Just as well for you, Pat, the boys told me who it was before they bolted." He raised the gun to explain what might have happened otherwise.

"For heaven's sake, what's the matter? Where's everybody? What's up with you?"

"I suppose all the natives have dived into the bush, not wanting to be mixed up in it when you arrived," said Downey, his booming voice reduced to a cracked whisper. "There's a war on," he added. "I'm dying, you know."

He spoke with the dull and bitter resignation of one who has had ample time in which to imbibe an unpleasant truth.

"You've a touch of fever that's what's wrong with you."

"Is it? Take a look at this."

The palsied hands slipped down his pyjama trousers to reveal a thigh swathed in bandages.

"But that's not what's killing me, though I lost a lot of blood. I'll tell you what's killing me, Pat—hate is killing me, Pat, just sheer hate."

The representative of the law dung his hat on a table, drew up a chair and sat down by the bed.

"Look here, old man," he said, "stop talking in riddles. What's wrong here?"

"Yes," the husky murmur agreed. "Yes, that's right. Mighty glad you've come. You see, lying and hating him I'm killing myself—just like the Kannaks do when they turn their faces to the wall of the hut and die."

Paterson went into the house, found the whisky and poured out a stiff tot. He returned to find Downey watching the head of the steps with glazed but intent eyes.

"Drink this!"

The ring of authority roused Downey, and when the drink had been gulped down Paterson went on in the same tone, "Listen to me, Tim Downey. You know me. I'm your friend. What the devil's the row?"

"War between me and him, with the old Padre neutral and trying to do the dove-of-peace act. That dirty swine, Voyle! That gutter-rat! That thief! That murderer!"

"Never mind the bouquets. I know all about Voyle. Tell me what he did."

"Tried to murder me! He started up on one elbow, and gripped Paterson's knee. 'Think of that—after me putting up with him all this time!'

"Voyle shot you, eh?" prompted Paterson.

"Yes, the swine." It all began when Tana found the pearl. His eyes cleared, as the interest of the tale gave him strength. "Pat, you never saw a pearl like that in all your life. Talk about kings' ransom! That pearl would have ransomed all the kings there are left. Why, the stuff I gave Tana for it! Reams of calico, an axe, a mouth organ, tinned beef—oh, I treated him proper. I wish you could see that pearl."

"Where it is? I won't steal it."

"No, you wouldn't," Downey said, "but he did! That little swine, Voyle!" The Padre and he came in for a drink and a yarn round about sundown."

"But how did he steal it? You're big enough to look after your own property."

"Devil of a storm came up. Struck a hut alongside here, and killed a kid. 'Id just been showing the Padre and him the pearl. Naturally, there was some excitement. While we were making out what had happened, Voyle grabbed the pearl."

"How do you know?"

"Do you think the old Padre did?"

"Of course not, but—"

"Only the three of us in the room. No boys—nobody else."

"But I suppose you went out to have a look-see?"

"We did. But I took the match-box with me. Shoved it in my pocket. Wouldn't leave a thing like that lying about. Needn't have troubled. The box was empty. He'd pinched my pearl. Went straight off without coming back for a drink. Struck me as rum at the time, but when I found he'd got the pearl I saw it wasn't so rum either."

"So! And then?"

"Well, I went round to his place. There he was with that native piece of his, celebrating, a drink at his elbow. 'Voyle, I say to him, 'you stole my pearl.' At that he laughs nasty like, and comes back; 'I've got your pearl, and you can go to hell.' A bit more talk—both hot, you understand—and all at once he whips out a revolver, and says: 'Out o' here, or, by the living hokey, I'll shoot you dead!' Meant it, too—and me there unarmed and only after my lawful property. As I tell you, my temper was up, and why shouldn't it be?—I wasn't going to be murdered in cold blood by that little worm, as well as robbed. I took a rush at him, and the table went over. Self-defence, I tell you—he's out to kill, is Voyle. He fired twice, but I had him good and strong, so he couldn't aim. Twice down here in the leg. Would have been the heart if he could have made it so. But I've got his arm in a grip a Jap diver taught me, and I smothered it with a click. Just as it goes, bang! he brings the butt down on my head. Stars and things, and next I know I'm lying here, weak as a kitten, rotten with fever, my leg busted, my head a hot coal, and the Padre is pottering about."

Paterson commiserated to allow him a breathing space, and then asked: "But why the gun now, Tim?"

"That Voyle's a bad 'un. He knows it's him or me now, and he'll come to finish off the job. But I'm all ready for him, and I'll shoot on sight." He patted the gun. "No use me going out after him crooked like this, and that infernal girl of his with all her relatives a-spying on me—not a bit of good. So I'm just waiting patient till he comes for me."

Far thunder growled. He closed his eyes and panted; his face twitched.

"Tim, you don't need to worry any more about this, Taruka may be out of the world, but there's a law here just as much as there is in London. I mayn't be much of a Sherlock Holmes, but I'm a good enough policeman. Stop fussing yourself. I'll deal with Voyle, and I'll do it quick. Just you lie quiet awhile. Be back soon."

Downey babbled thanks and threats. He had diagnosed his own case well. The solitude of Taruka had made him into a primitive man, easily overthrown by his emotions. Hate seethed in him like a poisonous yeast.

Paterson started off grimly to deal with Voyle. The man was a beachcomber, and to Paterson the term was one of deepest opprobrium utterly lacking in romance. He had gone native, he drank, he was a centre of mischief. Voyle's home was a mere hut. As he

A Jacket For Every Costume

Chic Idea For Formal And Informal Wear.

EVERY little costume has a jacket all its own. It is the theme song for the spring fashions this year. Intuitive women have felt this coming for a long time. And chic women have hailed the idea as the smartest fashion conception of all times. But the idea has not become really popular—or for that matter available to the public—until now. And what an idea it is! It does not matter whether the costume is woolen or silk—whether it is designed for country or sport or town or the cocktail hour or formal evening. That modish idea goes on—and every costume has a jacket all its own.

The thing that varies in the jackets. They can be almost anything this year. Many of the most youthful and dapper for spring are little hip-length, or shorter, affairs nipped in at the waistline. Others are straight-hanging (a blessing for the nonperfect figure) and extend to the finger tip or three-quarter of seven-eighths—quite as you please. There is the widest tolerance for almost every length—and type, too.

Fashion Of 1880 Furnishes "Idea"

Old Clothes Modernised By Paris Designer.

Paris. GOING backwards is often a sign of progress. In the fashion orchards or other days there were plenty of trees with good fruit on them but the foliage often was so thick you couldn't find it. To-day, the style researchers have stripped off the unnecessary leaves and discovered some very delightful things. Maggy Rouff goes back to about 1880. All the most attractive items—the soft frilly lace jabots, ruffles, flounces and delightful necklines that give delicious creamy skins, are in her list.

Then there are those de Medici collars and Queen Anne affairs, but only for evening, when there are no hats to get in the way. Sleeves

"Gadgets" For Spring

Choice Of Season's New Novelties.

METAL JEWELLERY

SOME kit-shaped hand-bags have been made of woven linen—string to accompany the linen tweed suits that are being worn.

These bags have coloured frames and handles. When soiled, they can be cleaned with soap and a damp brush.

Carefully chosen two-colour dress schemes have taken the place of the "all-one-colour" outfit and the new jewellery is being designed with this in view.

Coloured Glass

There will be a great revival of coloured glass or composition "slave" bracelets and bangles. Some clear red ones, are both effective and inexpensive.

Metal Jewellery

Enamelled metal jewellery will also have a certain vogue, but some necklaces offer the greatest surprise. They consist of about 60 strands of what appears to be dull silver, or gold, wire, held by a chromium clasp. Actually, the "wire" is cellulosed silk string.

Copper or chromium "hooks" in place of buttons on knitted blouses of wool or string are another novelty.

Heavy Shoes To Suit Tweed Fashions

THE popular acceptance of tweeds as a sportswear and street fashion has led to a group of shoes very casual in appearance and decidedly comfortable. They are made of sturdy leathers, strong but not too heavy, both grained and smooth. They are seen in oxfords, in ghillie types, in tailored straps and spectator type pumps. They are at their best in brown and are most popular in that colour for the tawny tweeds are the decided leaders in the fashion story.

often are very medieval with constrictions above and below the elbow, but with a decided ease of the mumps in between. The bustle has switched from the back to the side and takes the form of huge bows of taffeta, or a single pouch of material assisted inflationally by a wad of buckram underneath.

Longest Trains Seen For Years

New Feature In Paris Evening Modes.

THE longest trains Paris has produced in many years appear in the new spring evening mode just shown to American and European buyers.

Though most designers showed trains sweeping the floor for only six or eight inches, others displayed gowns with yard-long trains varying from a spreading peacock effect to a narrow fish tail. While the mannequins handled them with ease and grace, buyers say madame had better practice a bit in front of her mirror before she sallies forth in her new spring frock.

One designer showed gowns with narrow trains long enough to hook to the waistline when their wearers wish to dance. Another put ruffled petticoat foundations under this frock to avoid the bare-legged effect to which so many women object when trains are lifted. A third, who designed frocks with trains of medium length, slashed them on one side clear to the knee.

Back Detail In Dress And Skirt Designs

AS a direct contrast to the dress with front fullness comes the dress with detail in the back. A series of pleats extending from waist to hem in back is an example. There are also some skirts with absolutely no detail in the front, but with all seamings concentrated at the back.

Frilly Neckwear For Smartness

Lace And Organdie Cuffs And Collars.

THE lacier and frillier the neckwear the smarter the costume.... that seems to be the fashion rule for spring. For ever so many of the new dresses are trimmed with a touch of lace, or organdy or the newer organza. It is a fresh touch that adds just the proper fluff to any dress. Be it dark, pastel or print. Many a last season's frock is saved by one of these clever little collars. Cuffs are shown on some of the sets, but with three-quarter sleeves so important, cuffs are taking a back seat. White is the principal colour, though some pastels are seen.

How Tempting these Tea Cakes Look

Spread with Butter Cream Icing
Topped with Delicious Nuts.

Break open one of these Tea Cakes. It's as fluffy as a golden cloud. This is the ideal cake for bridge parties, picnics, or afternoon teas. How simple to make, too. Start by buying a can of Royal Baking Powder and then follow the recipe exactly, for perfect results.

Mix ½ cup shortening and ¼ cup sugar adding sugar slowly and beating in well until blended; add 6 egg yolks, and beat until light and creamy. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla or lemon extract. Sift together 1 ½ cups pastry flour, 2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder, and ¼ teaspoon salt, and add, alternately, with ½ cup of milk, to the first mixture. Half fill paper baking cups and set each into greased muffin pans; or use small, round, metal pans. Bake in moderate oven about 30 minutes. Ice, and garnish with nutmeats. (See icing directions under recipe).

BUTTER CREAM ICING.

¼ cup butter, 1 ½ cups Powdered sugar, ¼ teaspoon flavouring extract Cream.

Sift sugar, add gradually to butter, mixing and working in well until blended. Add few drops of cream at a time to make the right thickness to spread. Add flavouring.

BORDERERS LEAD IN
SOCCER RACENATIONAL CHAMPIONS
BEAT ARTILLERY

SOUTH CHINA WIN

By virtue of a better goal average than St. Joseph's, who are meeting the East Lancers to-day, the Borderers are leading the premier soccer league championship table as the result of their win over the Artillery yesterday.

The Lincolns made an eleventh hour recovery, during which period they scored twice, to snatch a point from the Navy, but their chances of winning the title were dashed last week when they lost to the Saints.

South China, the champions, retained their position as the result of an unconvincing win over the Police, and the Club ran riot at the expense of Kowloon after a goalless first-half.

BORDERERS BEAT
ARTILLERY.Seal Impresses For Losers.

S.W.B. FORWARDS WEAK.

The Borderers were much the superior team at Caroline Hill yesterday and fully deserved their win by two clear goals over the Artillery, but they were by no means as impressive as when they beat the Police last week, nor did they show the form with which they beat China when representing Wales in the Sunday Herald Challenge Cup.

The weak spot was the forward line. They played clever football, and combined well, but their shooting powers were negligible; careful shooting would have resulted in more goals.

The Borderers were very slow in starting, the first five minutes of play was entirely in the hands of the Artillery, their forwards penetrated into the danger zone and it was only the excellent defence set up by Mullage and Morrison that prevented goals being scored. The Artillery were somewhat unfortunate in as much as that during this brief period of their away a very strong wind functioned. Morrison saved an almost certain goal in the opening minutes when he intercepted a pass across the goalmouth from Edmunds to Seal, who was in a favourable position for scoring.

The Borderers' first goal was the result of excellent team-work, the ball being passed from wing to wing eventually reaching Duncan, who, at 30 yards range, sent in a terrific shot which brought Durham to his knees, and Hazlewood dashed in to bundle Durham and the ball into the net.

The Artillery, from the centre kick, again attacked, Seal having bad luck with a shot which hit the side of the net. A minute or so later Seal received the ball to send a fine pass across to Smith, who miskicked, the ball being cleared well down field by Pedmore.

Line-up Changed
The Borderers made a change in the team positions about fifteen minutes from half-time. Mathias was brought from the right wing to centre, Forty taking his place. On resuming after the interval, however, both players reverted to their normal positions.

Pardoe, taking matters into his own hands, attempted solo efforts towards the later part of the game, his drop shots from near the half-way line causing Smith anxiety. The second goal of the game was scored about ten minutes from time. Underwood passed to Duncan, who was well positioned to give Durham no chance.

Borderers:—Smith; Mullane, Morrison; Davies, Pedmore, Underwood; Mathias, Hazlewood, Forty, Morris and Duncan.
Artillery:—Durham; Hall, Wroe, Birmingham, Pardoe, Harris, Smith, Edmunds, Woods, Knight and Seal.

HOME.Score Once Against
The Police.

TWO LISTLESS TEAMS.

In a very poor game between two listless teams, South China ran out winners against the Police by the only goal of the match.

South China opened the attack, Lai Sui-wing being unfortunate with a good shot from the left wing which grazed the bar to go out of play.

The only goal of the game was a very neat one. Young Sui-yick received the ball a few yards from the goal-line and passed back to the penalty spot where Tay Kwai-leung was waiting to score with fast drive.

On resuming after the interval the Police attacked the Chinese goal, Pile and Manning being unfortunate with shots which went just over the bar. The Police tried hard to score, but the judgement of the forwards in their kicking was sadly at fault.

South China:—Wong Wing; Leung In-chun, Lau Man; Tong Kwan, Leung Wing-chiu, George Young; Yeung Sui-yick, Ng Po-kui, Tai Kwai-leung, Lai Sui-wing and Leo Shek-yau.
Police:—McHardy; Blackburn, Pilkings; Brittain, Gough, Parker; Pile, Green, Shepherd, Brooks, and Manning.

LINCOLNS SECURE
LATE DRAW.Eleventh Hour Recovery
Against Navy.SURPRISING REVERSAL OF EXCHANGES.

After leading by two clear goals at the interval the Royal Navy were held to a draw by the Lincolns in a poor game that produced four goals on the Kowloon F.C. Ground yesterday.

For the major part of the match the Navy were superior, and it was fully anticipated that they would have an easy victory. The Lincolns, however, recovered in a surprising manner towards the end of the second half of the encounter when they netted both their goals in good style.

In the first half the Navy had the best of the game throughout and attacked continuously. After five minutes' play they opened their account following a fine passing movement from which Roberts centred for O'DONNELL to score with a fast drive at close range.

The Lincolns broke through some ten minutes from the start, and a very creditable performance by the forwards resulted in disaster when the Navy full backs cleared their lines. The sailor forwards carried out a fast combined movement and Roberts was left with a clear field, ran through to net the Navy's second goal.

Second Half Recovery
After the interval the Navy attacked strongly, but Higgins saved brilliantly from Smith O'Donnell. Shortly before the final whistle, however, the Regiment made a grand recovery, and some of the old-time Lincoln's football was witnessed. The forwards recovered their form, and, working well together, it was not long before MALPAS, with a magnificent shot, gave Pepper in no chance to save. A few minutes before the end a somewhat lucky shot brought the scores level. The ball came to McGuinness, some yards out, and he headed the ball towards the goal. It looked as though Pepper had plenty of time to save, but a slight misjudgment by him allowed the ball pass into the net.

GOLF FEVER

I must go down to the tees again, to the first tee and try.
And all I ask is a long shot, steering straight but not too high.
With a sweet click from the club-head, and the white sphere flying
Over the pines and in the midst of the fairway lying.

I must go down to the course again, for the short game's calling,
With a loud call, for my best ball through the green's appalling.
My number three is a tragedy, my chips grow punier,
And clouds of sand obscure the land when I find the bunker.

I must go down to the fairway, with spoon and brassie too,
And all I ask is a still head, slow back and follow through.
A good lie and a dropping shot on the green just dropping,
And to play a topping longer game no longer topping.

I must go down to the greens again, to the home green strut,
Try Jones' way, try Vardon's way, try any way to putt.
And all I ask is for each ball to roll to its goal,
Disappear with click. Then ho for a drink at the Nineteenth Hole!

VISITORS' UNCANNY ANTICIPATION

MALAYA DESERVEDLY BEAT HONG KONG BY FOUR CLEAR GOALS IN THE INTERPORT HOCKEY GAME AT KING'S PARK YESTERDAY BEFORE WHAT WAS UNDOUBTEDLY A RECORD LARGE CROWD.

Much faster on the ball, vastly superior in their stickwork, and possessing unlimited stamina, the visitors swept the Colony team off their feet after leading by a goal at the interval.

W. A. Reed and A. J. M. Rodrigues were the outstanding players in the Colony side, and had it not been for their combined efforts the Hong Kong side would have been beaten by a much greater margin.

The Malaya team, who beat the Civilians on Thursday, will meet Macao, who held Hong Kong to a draw in the only other Interport played, in the Portuguese Colony this afternoon. The visitors will meet the Combined Services eleven on Tuesday, and will leave for Singapore by the Antenor on Wednesday.

COLONY SKIPPER INTERVIEWED

Mr. A. C. C. Pedrian, the Malayan captain, when interviewed by the Sunday Herald after yesterday's game said that his team had fully enjoyed the game which was of a very high standard.

He said he had to thank his defence and half-backs, while the forwards held the advantage of extra speed. All the goals were of the snap kind, he said, and no-one would have stopped them.

TWICE AS FAST

"Our opponents were twice as fast a team," said Sur. Lt. Comdr. Phillips, the Hong Kong captain, after the game, "and in order to cope with their speed our defence was over-taxed. Our halves were caught frequently out of position, and the fine defence work by the Malayan full-backs gave our forwards no chance."

"They were definitely the better team," he concluded.

MACAO TEAM HAVE ADVANTAGE.

Lt. da Costa Optimistic.

Lt. da Costa, the Macao Hockey Club coach and former captain who was present at yesterday's Interport match, in an interview with the Sunday Herald representative, said that he had full confidence in the Macao team giving the Malayan team a hard fight in to-day's game in Macao.

"We have the advantage of a better combination as a team," he added. The Macao team is as follows: Almada (goal); J. Rodrigues (right back); M. Cardoso (left back); Lino Ferreira (right half); J. Ferreira (centre-half); A. Aires (left half); F. Nolasco (right wing); L. da Costa (inside right); F. Ramalho (centre-forward); H. Rosario (inside left) and A. Angelo (left wing).

MALAYA WIN INTERPORT

Among the prominent guests present were H.E. The Officer Administering the Government, Sir Thomas Southorn, C.M.G., K.B.E., accompanied by Lady Southern, and his A. D. C., Captain R. F. Walter.

On arrival His Excellency was met by Mr. E. W. Hamilton, the President of the Hong Kong Hockey Association, and both teams were introduced to His Excellency before the match.

Lt. Comdr. F. B. Leigh, R.N. (Hong Kong) and Mr. P. Bredy (Malaya) controlled the game.

Donald's Centres Unavailing

Donald was early conspicuous for Hong Kong, opening up the attack with several fine movements on the right wing and flashing across well-timed centres. These promising movements proved of no avail, however, the smart intercepting by the Malayan full-backs robbing the Colony sharpshooters of all opportunities for scoring. Rahman gave a magnificent exhibition of first-time clearances, displaying amazing accuracy.

Osman then set the Malayan forwards in motion, but Wong relieved a tense situation with a well-timed kick.

Malaya continued to press, and Perdiu repeatedly fed Baharom with perfect passes, and it was from one of these passes, that BAHAROM opened the scoring with a snap goal.

Lowe Saves Situation

C. O. La Brooy then checked a strong attack by Hong Kong, and in reply sent his forwards away, but Lowe saved the situation by conceding a fruitless corner.

Perdiu was a distinct menace in the Malayan attack, sending across some fine reversed stick centres, but Hong Kong looked dangerous when Lal Singh provided an opening, only for Eaden to sky the ball well over the goalposts.

Hong Kong now began to settle down and maintained a determined attack, but the Malayan defence was very safe, and the Colony defence was soon called on to relieve dangerous situations.

Perdiu broke through from a neat pass from Osman, and in a solo effort in which his spectacular one-handed stick play was brought into evidence, centred neatly.

Rajah Mohamed was well up on the ball, but Wong intercepted during an anxious melee in front of the Colony goalmouth.

Garthwaite Spoils Chance

Hong Kong then rushed away to the other end, but the attack was frustrated when Garthwaite was offside to a good centre from Donald.

The Colony half-back line were working like trojans to cope with the fast Malayan forwards, and the result was that their wing passes were invariably too hard, giving the wingers no chance at all.

The anticipatory play by the Malayan full-backs also proved a big obstacle to the attack.

The Colony defence showed signs of cracking up just before the interval. Lowe was outplayed at centre-half, the lightning like short passing movements indulged in by the visitors' inside forward trio leaving him helpless.

Rajah Mohamed broke through with a wonderful burst of speed and was just about to shoot when Wong relieved with a well-timed slide to the forward's feet.

Visitors' Determined Tackling

Hong Kong replied strongly, but both wing players were unable to make any headway against the dogged tackling of the Malayan half-backs.

Garthwaite was robbed of a golden opportunity by Rahman at right-back, who brought off a fine tackle to clear with a powerful drive. Malaya were attacking when the interval arrived.

Hong Kong showed signs of recovery after the interval, and Curry, after a brief period of mid-field play, sent in the first shot for Hong Kong, but Arlera cleared safely.

Curry again made a good effort on his own, but lost control of the ball, and was only able to make a feeble pass into the goalmouth.

Passes Intercepted

Lal Singh led Hong Kong in several fine movements on the left-wing, but on two occasions his passes were intercepted before they could reach Garthwaite.

Donald, however, on the opposite flank, was well out of the picture, being completely subdued by Abbas.

BAHAROM placed the issue beyond doubt for Malaya when he broke away with a terrific burst of speed to dribble past Phillips and give Wong no chance.

Malaya continued to press and Reed brought off two very fine clearances, coming right across to the left flank on one occasion. The Colony defence again showed signs of collapsing, and Malaya enjoyed the best of the remaining exchanges.

OSMAN scored the third goal for Malaya on the circle line, the shot passing Rodrigues and Phillips in turn. Wong, who was unlighted, made an attempt, but could not stop the ball in time.

CALEB added the fourth goal for Malaya a few seconds before full time. Snapping up a mishit by Phillips he raced through in a solo effort to dribble the ball past Wong to score the most spectacular goal of the match.

The following were the teams.
Malaya—Arjera (Perak), Rahman (Perak), C. O. La Brooy (Solangor), Allahud Khan (Perak), C. R. La Brooy (Perak), Abbas Bin Saaid (Malacca), Caleb (Perak), Baharom (Perak), Rajah Mohamed (Perak), Osman (Perak), and A. C. Perdiu (Singapore).

Hong Kong—R. H. Wong (St. Andrew's Club), A. J. M. Rodrigues (University), Surg.-Lt. Comdr. A. E. Phillips (Navy), W. A. Reed (Club), H. J. D. Lowe (Club), Lt. Comdr. J. A. C. Hill (Navy), Lieut. W. S. Donald (Navy), Lieut. J. H. Eaden (Navy), Lieut. E. N. Curry (Navy), Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite (Army), and Lance Naik Lal Singh (Army).

Britain's Financial Recovery.

As a result of a really national effort to meet the crisis, Britain has during the past two years recovered as has no other country. Her financial credit is as high as ever it has been. Her political credit is enhanced abroad by the persistence with which the British Government has pursued negotiations for reduction of armaments, and fortified them by its own example. London is again the world's foremost financial centre; "sterling is now going to stand," "as a sound currency, whatever may happen in other countries." The heart of the nation is solid and reliable; and the object lesson of British performance must reinforce faith abroad in the soundness of Britain's plan for international collaboration. Convincing descriptions of the economic revival in Britain, and the basis of public moral upon which it has been built, have been forthcoming from all quarters. A few weeks ago Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, declared that Britain "is now the strongest financial country in the world, and possesses the best credit, and the national finances are upon a foundation almost as secure as before the war." Moreover, Britain is steadily recovering her old place at the head of the world's trade. There could be no more striking gesture of budget buoyancy and general recovery of the Government's credit than the notification by the British Treasury that on April 15, the earliest optional date, it will pay off the holders of £105,000,000 of 1930-36 Treasury bonds. Considerations of policy herein are as important a factor as the prospects for cheaper money in the future. The Government wants to encourage industrial investment under the present easy market conditions. But the value of the gesture remains. The 3 per cent. funding loan, 1959-1969 with an issue of £150,000,000, from which the Treasury bonds will be paid, was very favourably received in London when announced last Wednesday. The British Government, Sir John Allen said, is now even lending money abroad, whereas two years ago, in face of a budget deficit of £175,000,000, foreign holders of short-term money in London were withdrawing their holdings in alarm. Mr. Hawtrey, in his recent book, "Trade Depression and the Way Out," traces the story of how, after suspension of the gold standard, a sagacious banking policy prepared the way for the great British conversion loan. The era of cheap money brought about by the reduction of interest rates has worked a vast improvement in all investment conditions. Besides the great conversions of Government indebtedness, British and Dominion, there has in the past year been extensive operation in company conversions. During 1933 there were 42 of these, and in all some £63,250,000 of company debentures were converted to a basis of about 4 per cent. The confidence in the re-established financial structure is spreading into a new confidence in industrial enterprise. The shipbuilding orders now preparing are the largest since the war. Employment is on the up-grade generally. Latest figures show that in the past year all annual records of registrations of new companies were broken. That commercial industry is responding to the opportunity of cheap money for investment is clearly established. It is this readiness to invest, the proof of confidence in the individual citizen, which illustrates best the lifting of Britain out of the depression. At a meeting of the London Regional Conference of the National Savings Movement recently, Mr. Runciman showed in a long list of figures from savings banks, insurance companies, and building societies, that £2,833,000,000 of home British investments are held by 14,000,000 to 15,000,000 of British citizens, an enormous spread of capital ownership through the adult population. The Bankers' Magazine reveals that, in its selected group of 365 stocks, having a total nominal capital par value of £6,683 millions, the appreciation up to November was no less than £500,000,000. The railway companies for the first time for many a day are recording encouraging improvement in revenues. The extension beyond the summer of reduced fares brought in between August and November a comparative increase of £550,000 in passenger receipts, and, what is given more heartening, is the rise in merchandise freights. The immediate result is the seeking of further capital for an extension in the electrification of main lines. Railway stocks alone appreciated during the above-mentioned 11 months by £181,000,000; a year ago, as the "Spectator's" financial critic writes, holders would have found difficulty in marketing their stocks at almost any price. These are some of the facts in the inspiring story which can best be read in the Budget.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE FUNCTIONS

Many Social Activities During Week.

The social activities of His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., and Lady Peel, and the Government House functions for the week ending Saturday, are shown in the following official communique issued from Government House yesterday.

Tuesday, April 3.

SAMPANS COLLIDE

A minor collision between two sampans occurred in the Harbour yesterday evening at about 8.45 o'clock. Little damage was done, and nobody was injured.

HONG KONG AND THE NEW TERRITORIES. — No. 99.

Kam Tin District.

The afternoons of 29th March and of 2nd April were spent in the Kam Tin Valley and were very profitable; on the second afternoon no less than 34 species of birds were seen by the party of four of us. (This equals our record of 34 seen by five observers on 19th March 1933 in the Sham Chun Valley). These included two new records for the Colony and one rare passage migrant. This last was a male Japanese Blue-and-White Flycatcher, Cyanoptila c. cyanociliosa, a most vividly coloured bird probably the most gorgeous we have seen in the Colony. Forehead crown and nape brilliant cobalt blue; upper back purplish blue, lower back and wings blue; tail black with a white base; throat and breast black; abdomen white. We have previously identified this bird in the Colony in 1929, 1930 and 1931 (twice). This is one of the brilliantly coloured flycatchers that pass on their way north, through the Territories in March and April.

The two new records are the Siberian House Martin, Delichon urbica whiteleyi, and the Chinese White Cheeked Drongo, Dicrurus leucogenys cerussatus. At Kam Tin the Eastern House Swallow was present in abundance but at Sek Kong a little further up the valley we noticed hawking flies with the Swallows a number of birds which were not swallows. The noticeable features as compared with the Swallow were smaller size, tail not or but slightly forked, white lower back and rump, under parts white, the rest dark steel blue or black. La Touche Vol. I, p. 384 writes of this species that it "is not frequently seen on the China coast; the two specimens in my collection, one of which is from Shaveishan and the other shot by me at Chingwangtso, and flock noticed by Vaughan and Migrating Birds. On the 24th March Egrets had not arrived in the Lam Tsun Valley but they were seen there on the 25th which means that they must have migrated into the Colony on that date or on the previous night. A friend identified the Lesser Egret and the Cattle Egret. Most of the birds of prey except the Kite, Sea Eagle and possibly Osprey stay here for the winter only, migrating north when the warmer weather comes. On the morning of April 2nd in Pokfulam we noticed a most unusual sight; a large flock of hawks (probably Kestrels but possibly Sparrow Hawks), flew over our head wheeling about in the air like Kites but moving steadily northward. Thirty-six birds were counted and there may have been more; they circled over Mount Davis for some time before moving on. This is perhaps the most interesting time of the year as far as migration of birds is concerned for our winter residents are leaving us, e.g. kestrels, the transit migrants are passing through, e.g. flycatchers and the summer residents are arriving, e.g. egrets and pond herons. On 4th April we observed two Java sparrows, the first we have been this year; this bird is very familiar as a cage bird but it regularly visits the Colony in the spring and summer.

ROTARY DIRECTOR IN COLONY

Dr. Fong Foo See "Self Made" Man.

FORMER ENGLISH EDITOR OF COMMERCIAL PRESS

Dr. Fong Foo See, Director of Rotary International for 1933-4 and a former President of the Shanghai Rotary Club, will be one of the guests at the Hong Kong Rotary Club tiffin on Tuesday.

Dr. Fong was born in Toysan, Kwangtung, a farming village, the son of a poor farmer. With others of his village, he went to America at the age of 13 and started as a domestic in Sacramento, California, at a dollar a week. He was then studying English in an evening mission school. For 24 years he worked and studied in America before returning to China to become one of the leading editors and writers.

Teaches in Canton.

He worked his way through high school, Pomona College, and the University of California, where he obtained his Bachelor's degree in 1905. He then did graduate work at Columbia University where he received his M.A. degree in 1906.

He joined the staff of the Salvation Army in San Francisco in 1899, and worked in that field until 1897, when he resigned to enter college. In 1906 Dr. Fong returned to China to teach English in government colleges in Canton. He took the Chinese Government examinations for returned students, and was awarded the Chinese degree, which corresponds in a way to the Ph.D. degree. Pomona College conferred on him in 1922 the degree of LL.D.

Dr. Fong became chief English editor of the Commercial Press, the largest book publishing company in Shanghai, in 1908, and held that position until his retirement in 1929. He married Dr. Laura Lum in 1908, and has five children, one son, and four daughters.

Shanghai "Y" President. Among his public services may be enumerated the following: 12 years Chairmanship of the National Committee of the Y.M.C.A. of China;

several terms as President of the Shanghai Chinese Y.M.C.A., first Vice-President of the Chinese Mission to Lepers; Elder of the Cantonese Union Church; on the Executive Committees of the National Child Welfare University Club, and member of the board of directors of a number of educational institutions.

Dr. Fong joined the Rotary Club of Shanghai in 1922, and was a delegate to the Los Angeles Rotary Convention in that year. After the convention he continued on a journey around the world, visiting a large number of Rotary Clubs. He was President of the Shanghai Rotary Club in 1931-32.

Flowering Shrubs. More summer shrubs are coming into flower: Caesalpinia sepiaria with sulphur yellow flowers larger than those of C. naga is in blossom in the Kam Tin district. The leaf has 5 to 6 pairs of primary pinnae each with 6 to 10 pairs of leaflets whilst C. naga has 2 to 4 pairs of primary pinnae and 2 to 3 pairs of leaflets on each. C. vernalis with a rusty brown tomentum on the inflorescences and young shoots and with golden yellow flowers is coming out in the ravines on Mount Victoria and elsewhere, the leaf has 9 to 12 pairs of primary pinnae each with 6 to 7 pairs of leaflets.

several terms as President of the Shanghai Chinese Y.M.C.A., first Vice-President of the Chinese Mission to Lepers; Elder of the Cantonese Union Church; on the Executive Committees of the National Child Welfare University Club, and member of the board of directors of a number of educational institutions.

There is ONLY ONE Ovaltine

THERE are definite reasons why delicious "Ovaltine" is the supreme tonic food beverage.

The formula and scientific processes employed in the preparation of "Ovaltine" cannot be copied. It is made from the highest qualities of malt extract, fresh creamy milk and new-laid eggs. There is no indigestible starch in "Ovaltine," nor does it contain large percentages of cheaper ingredients—such as sugar and cocoa—to reduce the price.

Every drop of "Ovaltine" is pure, concentrated, health-giving nourishment. Its ingredients are so perfectly balanced to the needs of the body and are so easily assimilated that its regular use strengthens instead of overtaxing the digestive organs. As you value your health, reject substitutes.

Toc H in the City?

One of the most famous of the City churches, St. Swithun's, London Stone, looks like becoming another outpost of "Toc H."

The new rector, the Rev. Alan Colthurst, who has been inducted has for some time past been a Toc H padre in Yorkshire.

He was one of the young men who were attached to the original Talbot House at Poperinghe during the war.

The church faces Cannon-street Station and Mr. Colthurst is determined to make St. Swithun's mean something to the 50,000 people who use the station every day.

He is going to "keep the church open from dawn to dark. He is going to see that the famous London Stone in the wall is no longer used as a receptacle for empty cigarette cartons and banana skins.

"Coroner of the King's House"

It is understood that Lieut.-Col. W. H. L. McCarthy, second deputy-coroner for S.E. London, is to be the new coroner for the King's Household.

Colonel McCarthy is both a barrister and a doctor. He has been physician to the Royal Courts of Justice, and also Medical Officer of Health for Chelsea and the Inner and Middle Temples.

In his new post—which was created in Saxon times under the title of "Coroner of the King's House"—he will be responsible for holding inquest on "persons whose bodies are lying within the limits of any of the King's palaces or in any house where his Majesty is then demurant."

Another Insurance Bill

The new Government legislation dealing with "insurance business generally," of which Mr. Douglas Hacking gave a mysterious hint in the Commons recently, will be a large and highly technical measure.

Nearly ten years ago a committee was set up under the present Mr. Justice Clouston to report on amendments desirable in the Assurance Companies Act of 1909. The committee took a year to do its task. Since it reported successive Governments have nibbled at the subject.

Negotiations with interested parties are still proceeding. The introduction of the measure, which is bound to occupy much time in going through, will depend on the state of Parliamentary business.

Motor Insurance Excluded

It is understood that the measure will not deal with motor insurance.

The Ministry of Transport are conducting a separate investigation on reform of the motor vehicle insurance law.

But ten years ago the Clouston Committee said it was a public danger that many branches of motor vehicle insurance could be undertaken without such safeguards as were laid down for accident business.

The new Bill will be in the form of amending the 1909 Act. It will lay down the amounts of deposits to be made by insurance companies, define the form of balance sheet to be kept, and prohibit transfers and amalgamations of undertakings except under a specified scheme.

It will also deal with the winding up of companies and define certain liabilities resting on directors. Part of the Bill will set provisions applicable to Lloyd's underwriters.

Church's Chancellor

The Church Assembly will not find it easy to select a successor to Canon Partridge, its Chancellor of the Exchequer.

He is shortly going to the peaceful post of Archdeacon of Oakham and Canon Residentiary of Peterborough Cathedral.

As secretary of the Central Board of Finance and financial secretary of the Assembly he has shown business acumen which would have made him a money-magnate in the City.

He is, moreover, a master of the soft answer which turneth away wrath. Again and again when the Assembly budget has been under debate he has suavely turned hostility into support.

He furnishes an example of the man of small stature who is a stranger to diffidence.

Ex-Premier for London

A former Prime Minister of Turkey is shortly coming to London as Ambassador. Turkish diplomatic service who held diplomatic posts abroad before the war.

In 1914 he was Turkish Minister in Sofia. Mustapha Kemal, the Dictator, was his Military Attache.

After the Turkish Revolution Fethi became President of the National Assembly in Ankara. He was Prime Minister in 1923, but resigned in 1925 to go to Paris as Ambassador.

Five years later he asked permission of Kemal to return to Ankara to lead the Opposition in the National Assembly.

Kemal, who had long wished to restore the two-party system, agreed, and Fethi founded the Liberal Republican group.

Now he is returning to diplomacy.

The Chancellor's Joke

Mr. Neville Chamberlain played an old Parliamentary game recently.

He was asked by Sir Alfred Knox whether in his Budget he would reduce the duty on licensed houses.

Instead of firing it off at once, the Chancellor made a great show of fumbling with his papers. He hesitated to such good purpose that the House, was on its toes. Here at last, the members thought, was a pre-Budget pronouncement.

As the tension reached its highest the Chancellor conveniently found the paper.

"The hon. gentleman," he said, "will not expect me to anticipate my Budget statement."

Mr. Thomas on Tour?

It is understood that he has been invited to take part in the State of Victoria Centenary Celebrations at Melbourne, but has not yet decided whether he can accept.

Speakers at the New Zealand dinner recently conjured up visions of the Secretary for the Dominions fighting the big game fish in Dominion. He admitted afterwards that he had received the invitation from Melbourne. Obviously, Mr. Thomas added, he could not visit Australia without visiting New Zealand.

In 1931 Mr. Thomas had practically completed arrangements for a tour of all the Dominions. The official reason for the tour was to prepare the way for the Ottawa agreements.

But Mr. MacDonald insisted that all the Ministers should remain at their posts because of the economic crisis.

Bigger Flats.

The L.C.C. £1,000,000 rehousing scheme on the former Duchy of Cornwall estate beside Kennington Oval should be an interesting experiment in one of the vital points of the problem: "decanting."

By building blocks of flats accommodating 350 people to the acre the L.C.C. will be able to house 6300 people on the Oval site. This is about four times the present population.

As soon as the Oval flats are finished they will become homes for 2,400 people from 240 condemned houses round Tyers-street. There, in turn, demolition and redevelopment will be carried out immediately.

In both places Mr. H. R. Selley, chairman of the L.C.C. Housing Committee, is increasing the percentage of four-roomed flats, with scullery and bathroom in addition, to let at 10s. to 11s. a week, including rates.

In London the all-in cost of demolition and rehousing works out at £140 for each displaced person.

KOWLOON SILK STORE IN LIQUIDATION

First Public Examination Conducted.

PROPRIETOR'S SALE TO WIFE

The first public examination of the proprietors of the Kowloon Silk Store, in liquidation, was conducted by Mr. J. J. Hayden, Official Receiver, before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. McGregor, at the Bankruptcy Court yesterday morning.

It was stated that the proprietor of the business, Mr. Verhonal had handed it over to his wife, Wong Yung, and Nellie Wong, his concubine, four or five years ago, and in February, 1933, he absconded to Japan.

Wong Yung, examined by Mr. Hayden, stated that she knew very little about the business. Four or five years ago her husband had transferred it to her in consideration of a payment of $15,000 cash and a quantity of jewellery, the value of which she did not know.

In February, 1933, her husband had been examined by a doctor, and ordered to go to Japan for his health's sake, and since then she had neither seen nor heard of him.

She knew nothing of a debt of $100,000 owing by her husband to the French Mission, and stated that she was just a figurehead at the shop, and that it was run by her manager, Mr. Tarachand, who has since absconded.

Proceeds From Sale

Since the business had closed, Wong Yung stated, she had been living on the proceeds from the sale of her furniture, and now there was very little left for herself and her six children.

Nellie Wong, questioned by Mr. Hayden, stated that she was a concubine of Mr. Verhonal, and that she went to Japan with him in 1933.

In February of this year, hearing from a friend that the business was in a bad way, she returned to Hong Kong to make investigations.

She had been living with Mr. Verhonal for six or seven years, and in 1931 had invested $5,000 in the business. Witness admitted that she was living on proceeds from the sale of personal property. Mr. Hayden then brought his examination to a close.

MOW SANG TONG BANKRUPTCY

Medicine Firm's Heavy Losses.

TRUSTEE OPPOSED BY OFFICIAL RECEIVER

An order for adjudication was made against the Mow Sang Tong medicine shop, of 16, Bonham Strand West, at the Bankruptcy Court yesterday morning, before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. McGregor.

Mr. J. J. Hayden, the Official Receiver, opposed the appointment of the trustee, chosen by a majority at a meeting of the creditors, on the ground that he was a brother-in-law to the sole proprietor of the firm, Ching Yat-tung. He also applied for an adjudication order. Mr. Loseby, on behalf of the creditors, supported the application.

The order was made by His Lordship, who also re-appointed the trustee and a committee of inspection.

Mr. Hayden examined Ching Yat-tung, who stated that he came to Hong Kong 40 years ago, and that on leaving school he joined the Mow Sang-tong business, which was started by his father.

Thirty years ago his father made him a gift of the business, which was then worth $100,000.

1930 Begins Losses
Ching further stated that during the first 30 years of his proprietorship, the business had paid a small profit, but in 1930 it started to lose heavily, and in 1931 and 1932 his losses amounted to $150,000.

He continued to run the business in the hope that trade would improve, and relatives, who realised his position, lent him money with which to carry on. In 1933 he lost a further $20,000, and, having abandoned all hope of recovery, he called a meeting of his creditors.

Ching stated that he was a married man with 13 children and a concubine. His family was now dependent on relatives, and he had no property or money.

Mr. Hayden then concluded his cross-examination and the hearing was adjourned until next court.

ST. JOHN AMBULANCE BRIGADE BALL

Large Crowd Attend Hong Kong Hotel.

OUTLINE OF WORK SINCE 1916.

Eulogistic references to the St. John Ambulance Association and Brigade were made by Sir William Shenton when speaking last night at the annual ball of the Association, held at the Hong Kong Hotel Roof Garden.

In an earlier speech, the Chairman, Dr. Li Shui-fan, outlined the activities of the Association since its inception in 1916, and paid especial tribute to the work of the present Secretary, Mrs. Langley.

Among the large and representative gathering were Sir William Shenton, the President, Miss Y. Shenton, Dr. and Mrs. W. B. A. Moore, Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Valentine, Dr. Li Shui Fan, Dr. Ma Luk, Dr. Arthur Wu, Dr. K. W. Yip, and Dr. T. C. Wong.

Songs by Miss Elvie Yuen and Mr. Li Chor Chi, accompanied by Mr. J. G. Charlton, provided a pleasing touch of variety to the evening's programme.

Chairman's Speech

The Chairman, Dr. Li Shui Fan said:

In a function of this nature, it is customary that some one should announce the objects and reasons of such a convivial gathering. With this as my excuse, you will bear with me if I ask you to be good enough to give your feet and the band a rest, so that I may be able to say a few words in reference to the object of the Ball, and the work of the Hong Kong Branch of St. John's Ambulance Association and Brigade.

I do not quite know why I am asked to take the chair this evening, I presume it is because I am an old and rusty member of the Brigade who has enlisted as long ago as 1916, the year of the local Brigade's inception. But as an old officer, looking back to what the Brigade was 18 years ago, I am proud to tell you that it has had a wonderful beginning under that veteran leader, Commissioner Ralphs, and that since then it has had a most successful career. The Brigade has grown from a first batch of 100 men, to 600 strong today, while the nurses V.A.D. force has increased from 12 in 1916 to 140 this year.

There is one unique feature concerning members of the Brigade, which I should like to mention, that is, although the enlistment is entirely voluntary, a considerable number of members have stuck steadfastly to the Service for many years. In fact, 20 members have qualified by examination for the ten years' Long Service Medal, and two have qualified 15 years of continuous service and efficiency.

10,000 Cases in Month

You will see from your souvenir programme that in addition to the First Aid work, the Brigade has conducted a number of charity clinics in the New Territories. I would like to tell you in round figures some of the recent cases.

In maternity cases the number attended by the Brigade, was nearly 100 per month. In the nine centres in the New Territories giving free treatment to the injured and the sick-poor, over 10,000 cases were treated monthly. Last year, the Brigade vaccinated 430,000 cases in the Colony free of charge. 200 accident cases were attended to, and the Brigade's ambulances have carried over 2,000 cases.

Now, concerning the object of this Ball, I need hardly tell you that it is organised for financial reasons. You may be surprised to know that the Brigade, unlike other fortunate Philanthropic institutions in the Colony, does not enjoy any subsidy, endowment or the privilege of a lottery. Our only source of support is, therefore, direct from the public. Nevertheless, you will observe this evening, that there is no selling or auctioning of articles, and there are no subscription books passed; but if you and your friends should sympathise with our work, I am sure the Honorary Treasurer, qualified success.

MANUK MEMORIAL SERVICE

Theosophical Society Pay Tributes.

SECOND ANNIVERSARY

The second anniversary of the death of Mr. M. Manuk, Founder-President of the Manuk Lodge of the Theosophical Society, was commemorated yesterday afternoon by a Memorial Service, conducted by Mr. J. Russell, at the Society's Rooms in Queen's Road Central.

Many friends of the late Mr. Manuk were present, including his sister, Miss Manuk, Mr. W. Felshow, Mr. T. M. Gregory and Mrs. Gregory.

After a short meditation Mr. Russell addressed the meeting. He said that the friends of Mr. Manuk must not despair because he had "gone over to the other side", for, although he was not with the Lodge physically, he was in constant touch with them, and that his presence could be felt whenever they gathered together.

Mr. Russell said that the loss of their brother meant a great deal to the Lodge, as could be gathered from seeing the beautiful floral tributes which had been sent.

Living Memorial

Mr. Russell then alluded to the good work done by Mr. Manuk in connection with the Lodge, and in other directions in the Colony, and said that those who knew him best had loved him most. No memorial had been set up to him, for, at his own desire, his remains had been cremated and cast into the sea. There was, however, a living memorial to him in the work he had done, and which was now being continued. Those who knew him would remember how, when worn down with work in trying to heal a sick member of the Lodge, he contracted a fatal disease. In closing, Mr. Russell asked all the members to bear in mind Mr. Manuk's last instructions to them, "Always to love each other, always to be happy with each other, and always to strive and work together."

Emulating Lost Brother

Mr. W. Felshow, Vice-President of the Lodge, called back to mind the brilliant and charming personality of Mr. Manuk. He said it was quite impossible to know him without making friends with him, and quite impossible to make friends with him without loving him. He asked the members of the Society always to try to emulate their lost Brother, and to spread his love to everyone they might meet.

A few moments of meditation were spent in honour of Brother Talati, of the Manuk Lodge, who had recently been taken from them.

NEW SIKH TEMPLE AT VALLEY.

I.G.P. Performs Opening Ceremony.

The new Sikh Temple at Happy Valley was opened yesterday afternoon by the Hon. Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe, C.M.G., who was accompanied by Mr. W. R. Scott, Assistant-Superintendent of Police, and Mr. C. G. Perdue, Director of the C. I. D.

A large number of Indian constables were present.

Commissioner Morris would be glad to know.

Mrs. Langley Thanked

In conclusion, I should like to impart to you, that the Order of St. John, stands for service to humanity particularly to the injured and the sick-poor. Our motto, is to save life and to alleviate suffering, irrespective of Creed, nationality or race.

Before I finish, I wish to convey our hearty thanks on behalf of the Brigade to, first of all, the Ball committee for their untiring work, especially the Hon. Secretary, Mrs. Langley; secondly, the Wing On Company, Sincere's Company, and The Sun Company for their liberal donation of toys and decorations as well as for the disposal of tickets; thirdly the various entertainers of the evening for their most delightful musical items; and last, but not the least, I wish to thank you all, ladies and gentlemen for your support and in making this function such an unqualified success.

Lessons Learned From The Resurrection

World Revolutionised By Message Of Joy

GREATEST EVENT IN HISTORY

(By the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan.)

(This is another of the series of articles written exclusively for the "Sunday Herald" by the local Army chaplain.)

WE all know the story of Robinson Crusoe—how he was wrecked on the desert island, which he believed to be utterly uninhabited. Then one day as he was walking along the shore, suddenly to his amazement, he found a single naked footprint. One thing and one thing only could account for it—the fact that someone had passed along that way.

In just the same way the world has had certain footprints left upon it which are impossible to account for, unless someone or something definitely passed by to make them.

The shape of many of our hills and valleys is a proof of the passing of the ice during the glacial period. Every stratum of soil has its footprint which speaks its message. The ruined Norman castles in England are a witness to the Norman conquest, and so are many of the French words left behind in our language. Every city and town calls its streets and squares after the names of their famous sons, or some event in their history in the days gone by. None of these things would be there unless something in the past had happened to account for them.

Amongst the events of history, one which has left the greatest footprint behind, is the Resurrection. There are certain things in the world to-day, which are extraordinarily difficult to account for, unless something quite unusual happened on the first Easter Day, nineteen hundred years ago.

To-day about one-third of the whole world keeps the first day of the week as a Holy Day and a day of worship. Before the year 30 A.D. or thereabouts, no one in the world kept Sunday as a special day at all. The Roman Empire kept no particular day in the week; the Jews kept Sunday. And for them Saturday was The Sabbath. You have only to read the Gospels to see that if there was one institution in the world to which a Jew attached absolutely overwhelming importance it was the keeping of Saturday as a Holy Day. Nothing in their religion could compete in importance with the sacred Sabbath. It would have needed an earthquake at least, to have persuaded a Jew to change what was the very heart of his religion, and adopt another day instead. It would be less difficult to persuade the English people to adopt Tuesday as the weekly Holy Day instead of Sunday, than it

Clearly there was some fact in their minds which eclipsed even Good Friday and which made Sunday the appropriate Day for their Feast. And here again nothing except the Resurrection will account for their preference and choice. Sunday was the Resurrection Day, and to them this Service was as much a memorial of that great fact as it was of the Crucifixion.

Stimulus For Religion

The third great footprint was the advent of a new joy in worship. Religion, instead of being a dead and joyless thing, became alive and throbbing with happiness and enthusiasm. It transfigured the Apostles from the cowards of Good Friday, when they deserted and fled, into the heroes of the Book of the Acts. From being men you could hardly trust in any emergency they became known as the men who "turned the world upside down."

The imprint of the Resurrection had transformed their lives within one hundred years the story of the Empty Tomb had spread across the Empire like a flame. For the first time since the dawn of history there was at last something to look forward to beyond the grave. Death was not the end. God was no longer some Being of terror, whose wrath had to be appeased, but Some One Who had walked this earth in human guise, suffering as we suffer, our comrade, our Brother, and our Friend.

If He rose from the dead, as He said, He would, in fact, give that as the proof of His divinity, then His teaching must be true also, and the promises which He made, He will keep.

It was this message of joy and hope that revolutionised the world. No other gospel can do it. Amidst the tumult and turmoil of international and political differences, for which there seems to be no solution, the message of the Resurrection stands clear and plain. If the world is in a mess, it is not because it is God forsaken, but because men have chosen to forget God, or prefer to leave Him out of their calculations.

The Resurrection swept the world once. We could do with another vision of it to-day.

At a Committee Meeting of the Hong Kong Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, held on Thursday, the Chairman, Mr. Russell, expressed the heart-felt appreciation of the invaluable services that Mrs. R. Baker has, for so many years, rendered the Society.

Mr. Russell said that her approaching departure from the Colony was deeply regretted, and hoped that Mrs. Baker would enjoy a pleasant journey home, and would be spared many years to continue the valuable work she is doing in the interests of Animals.

The Committee further considered the encouraging letters received from Religious bodies in the Colony, who have expressed the desire to co-operate in the Society's activities. This is considered to be of inestimable value to the Society in their work.

The question of the use of humane killers in the slaughter houses was discussed, and it is gratifying to mention that there is every possibility of their introduction at an early date.

would be to induce a Jew to exchange Saturday for Sunday.

Change Of The Sabbath
Yet this thing actually occurred, and it was done voluntarily by men who were Jews born and bred. All our Lord's first disciples were Jews; and so strong was the Jewish influence in the early Church, that the Christians were commonly regarded as a Jewish sect, and Gentiles were excluded, and the rite of circumcision enforced for quite a long time.

Yet of their own accord men who were Jews had, within a short time after Good Friday allowed their sacred Sabbath to be eclipsed by another day—"the first day of the week."

We have therefore to find a fact sufficiently powerful to cause this change of the Sabbath into Sunday, for great effects are not produced without great causes. The Resurrection of Christ on the first day of the week is the only really adequate explanation of this remarkable change, and Sunday remains with us as a footprint which that amazing event has left behind.

The second footprint left by the Resurrection is "The Breaking of Bread," with its atmosphere of gladness and thanksgiving. It was instituted in one of the darkest hours of His life, on a night which none of those who were present could ever forget. It was admittedly a service held in memory of His death. The broken bread was His Body broken for them; the red wine of the cup was His Blood shed. The day therefore on which to commemorate that death was obviously Friday, the day on which He died. But instead of celebrating the Breaking of Bread on Friday, they did so on the Sunday!—Why?

Clearly there was some fact in their minds which eclipsed even Good Friday and which made Sunday the appropriate Day for their Feast. And here again nothing except the Resurrection will account for their preference and choice. Sunday was the Resurrection Day, and to them this Service was as much a memorial of that great fact as it was of the Crucifixion.

The third great footprint was the advent of a new joy in worship. Religion, instead of being a dead and joyless thing, became alive and throbbing with happiness and enthusiasm. ## Source Of Genius A Vast Problem

Disease Linked With Super-Mental Powers
Examples From History

(By Sir Herbert Barker.)

GENIUS, which may be defined as an exalted intellectual power, presents one of the great problems of human life. We recognise it when it appears and—soon or later—acknowledge it. Just what factors, hereditary and environmental, contribute to its production, we do not know.

But for the facts it would be quite natural to associate this flowering of the human spirit with perfection of the organism.

One might logically expect the genius to be a man of beautiful body and noble physical inheritance, a fit casket for the housing of the divine afflatus.

Yet all the facts point the other way, and the records of the world's greatest geniuses suggest that there is no relation between super-mental powers and the perfection of the body.

One may go even farther, for there is much evidence that there exists, between geniuses and bodily disease, some link. So many of them have had frail or deformed bodies, so many have spent lives of physical suffering as the victims of disease.

Is there any connection between the two? Is it possible that at times genius may require for its flowering a physical soil that departs radically from normal health?

Recently a distinguished scientist put forward the theory that Shakespeare was a victim of phthisis. But since his reasons for that opinion are technical they need not be cited here.

The fascinating fact that in many cases this disease has been associated with unsurpassed mental powers, particularly in the creative realm, remains. Take a few examples at random from the many.

Keats, who gave us "The Eve of St. Agnes," "Lamia," and "Hyperion," came of stock that had thrown up not one single outstanding man.

Victims of Phthisis
He himself confessed that he took little trouble with his poems, that he wrote them carelessly, at high speed. Yet, as all lovers of Keats know, his poems have a finish that suggests long and laborious hours upon the process of polishing.

Well, did the poison in Keats' blood, that poison that cut short his tragic life, act as a stimulant to his poems, incomparable and immortal, the product of some poison in his blood?

Take Chopin, whose romance with George Sand remains one of the great love stories of all time. Chopin died very young, but not before he had produced a vast quantity of sweet music. And Chopin died of phthisis. Was that music the product of the disease, its deadly efflorescence in the human victim of it?

Stevenson, another victim of this malady—one now happily on the way to extinction—likewise seems to have possessed a demon of creative energy that drove him, as though under the influence of a drug, to work feverishly.

Look at the quality of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and compare it with "Kubla Khan," said to have come to Coleridge in a dream. Is there not a resemblance between the product in the first case of the poisoning of disease, and, in the second, of the effects of opium eating?

Look where we will we find among the creative workers this strange prevalence of disease. Paul Gauguin, who painted his best pictures when dying in the South Sea Islands; Aubrey Beardsley, who composed and did his unique black-and-white work while in the grip of phthisis; Verlaine, the hopeless invalid who from the aqualor of poverty and disease secured immortal metrical music; Schubert, consumptive and alcoholic, who only came into the world to sing; Francis Thompson, who sought to ally the suffering of disease with drugs, and out of this morbid state created his peerless poems.

In the history of the world the great men of action have generally been men of superb physical health, though not always. Julius Caesar was an epileptic; Napoleon was a little man with feminine frame of body; Nelson was all his life sickly and ailing.

Genius From Glands?
But, generally speaking, the association of disease and genius is most marked where the genius takes the form of creative work in art, literature, or scientific discovery.

Modern science is only just beginning to appreciate the close relationship of the body with the mind.

Take, for example, recent work upon the ductless glands. These insignificant anatomical riddles are proving themselves to be the governing factors of mental and bodily development.

Genius may sometimes be but the sport of some minute gland functioning in an abnormal way.

It may be the result of the moving poison in the blood stream, a strange product of something horrible, much as the lily that grows most fair from the foulest river mud.

Gradually man is learning how to control the abnormal in the body. He can supplement the defective gland by extracts, he can sometimes modify the action of the too-active gland.

He is learning to modify and govern the body's growth and development, so that, at some future date, it may well be that he will unearth the laws that control the processes that make for the mediocre mind and the mind that soars into celestial realms.

THAT'S A CERTAINTY

"Who first thought of the word 'auburn'?" asks a correspondent. Somebody with red hair, I imagine.

"I can't think what to give my fiancée for his birthday."

"What is he?"

"A poet."

"I have the very thing—give him a waste-paper basket."

Apology

The theatre was in an uproar. "They're calling for the author," said the manager.

"But I can't make a speech!" replied the man responsible for the play.

The manager grabbed the playwright and impelled him along the passage. As he shoved him towards the curtain he said, curtly, "Well, just go in front and tell them you're sorry."

FAIRY TALE

Once upon a time there was a Wife who Mused to Herself: "I won't remind my Poor Husband that he Promised to get the House Painted and buy a New Dining-Room Suite in February."

The greatest mistake you can make in this life is to be continually fearing you will make one.

"Has - It-Ever-Happened-to - You - Brother" Corner
She (after the "breeze"): I admit I was wrong.

He Had His Suspicions

A party of tourists were being shown over the cathedral by a guide.

"Behind the altar," he told them, "lies Richard the Second. In the churchyard outside lies Mary Queen of Scots, also Henry the Eighth. And who," he demanded, halting above an unmarked flagstone, "who do you think is lying 'ere?"

"Well," answered a nearby tourist, "I don't know for sure, but I have my suspicions."

An athlete won a walking race, but was disqualified for coming first two years running.

The Optimist

As an athlete Brown was more enthusiastic than successful. On every possible occasion he entered a sports meeting, and with monotonous regularity finished amongst the "also rans."

At last he found himself one of only three starters in a race for which three prizes were offered.

He finished a bad third, and, without changing, dashed to the nearest post office and wired to his wife, "Clear the sideboard. I've started."

BRIDGE NOTES

When Your Adversary Holds the Winning Trump Card

BY FRANK ENGLAND

Necessity compels the declarer playing the two hands to draw adverse trumps generally as early as possible if those trumps are losers. If one adversary, however, is left after one or more rounds with the winning trump it is better not to waste a trump in drawing it but rather force it with winning cards in a plain suit.

When, in addition, it is necessary to discard one of declarer's losing cards before the adversaries can get in, the play becomes vital.

A simple example of such a situation is the following hand which I saw played, or rather misplayed, the other day at a club:

NORTH:—
S—A J x
H—A x x
D—A x x
C—x x x x

WEST:—
S—K x
D—K Q J x x
H—Q J 10
C—K Q x

SOUTH:—
S—Q x x x
H—K x x x x
D—x x
C—A x

EAST:—
S—10 9 x x
H—x x
D—x x x
C—x x x x

Both sides vulnerable—love score. The bidding as it should have been but was not:

West North East South
1 Diamond Double No 2 Hearts
No 3 Hearts No 4 Hearts

In actual play South bid only One Heart in response to his partner's double. His partner raised to Two, and the hand was played in Two Hearts only. South should, of course, have bid Two Hearts immediately after his partner's double.

The Play.

However, the play is the real point of interest, and here again South failed to rise to the occasion. West opened the King of Diamonds, won by the Ace in North.

On reviewing the hand it is clear that South's only chance of game is for the trumps to be equally divided (he must lose one) and for the Spades to lie very favourably. He must, therefore, scheme his play on these two chances. He should lead Ace and another trump, winning in his own hand, and then, ignoring the presence of the winning trump with the adversaries, lead a small Spade and finesse the Jack. If this holds, the Ace of Spades must be led in the hope of dropping the King. As you can see, both the finesse and the drop succeeded. The cards could not have lain more favourably for the declarer. A third Spade to the Queen either forces the winning trump or enables a ruff of the last Spade to be taken in dummy.

How elementary! I can almost hear the disgusted comments of my readers who have got so far. But my purpose is to provide an object-lesson and to point a moral. The moral is: however good you may think you are, never assume that you are proof against the simplest of mistakes in the play of the cards.

In A Culbertson Match. Here is the object-lesson:
NORTH:—
S—Q 5 2
H—K 6 5 3
D—10 9 3
C—Q 6 2
WEST:—
S—8 7 6
H—4
D—A 8 2
C—A 10 8 7 5 3
SOUTH:—
S—A K 10 9 8
H—A J 10
D—J 6 5
C—K J
EAST:—
S—J 4
D—K Q 7 4
C—9 4

This was Hand No. 181 in the recent Culbertson-Beasley Match. In both rooms West got the contract at Two Clubs; in Room 2 doubled by South. In neither room was the contract made. The record only gives the opening lead, the Queen of Spades (the same in both rooms); but it is quite easy to imagine the defence, and, in any case, best defence is powerless against correct play by West.

Let us assume that South took over the Queen of Spades and returned a trump. How should West plan the play of the two hands? He must lose Two Spades, a Heart and

Two Diamonds, and therefore cannot afford to lose a third spade. The only way to prevent this is to find the Diamond suit divided 3 and 3 against him and to discard the losing Spade on the thirteenth Diamond. But, and here is almost certainly where both players went wrong, the Ace of trumps must be held up until the second round! If West leads a second round, leaving a winning trump in against him, and then leads out three rounds of Diamonds and discards the losing Spade on the thirteenth.

If declarer is forced to lead trumps himself he must first play a small one to the 9 and then the Ace. Simple enough, but missed by both experts, one of whom was Ely Culbertson himself. Needless to say, no comment on the play is made by the author in his record. Many of us, however, could easily fill in the blank.

TO-DAY'S BRIDGE TIP

NORTH:—
C—10 5 4
SOUTH:—
C—A K 8 4 3

South is playing No Trumps and can afford to lose one trick in Clubs. How should he play?

ANSWER.

Lead Ace (or King) and then a small one to the 10 whether or not East or West plays Jack or not Queen on the first round.

SANITARY BOARD MEETING.

Licences For Sale Of Meat And Fish.

At the Sanitary Board meeting on Tuesday at 4.15 p.m. the President will move:—

"That the Board modify its decisions of August 12, 1924 (to refuse all applications for licences to sell meat in Health Districts Nos. 3 to 9 inclusive) and of April 20, 1926 (that no licences be issued to sell meat and fish on the peninsula, with certain exceptions), by the addition of the words: 'provided that the Select Committee for Special Food Licences may in their discretion grant licences for the sale of these articles in premises of a superior type and fitted with an approved modern chilled storage apparatus.'"

An application for an eating house licence at No. 5, Shaokwan Road, ground floor, will also be discussed.

LOTTERY TICKETS CASE.

$60 Fine Imposed.

Helen Chan, aged 47, a widow, was fined $60 by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning for the possession of 26 Macao lottery tickets in Des Voeux Road Central, on Friday.

Detective Sergeant Hemsley said that it had come to the notice of the police that quite a number of Macao lottery tickets had been brought to Hong Kong. The defendant, who admitted that she sold the tickets, also had several Irish Sweepstake tickets in her possession, he said.

SOURCE OF GENIUS A VAST PROBLEM

That means, I suppose, the vision of a human race composed entirely of scientifically produced super-men—which, I agree, is fantastic.

But already the fact is established that there exists some relationship between that accident of Nature we term genius and the diseases to which we are heir.

We bemoan the terrible legacy of the past that has bequeathed to us the dread diseases and we turn our attention to their conquest.

Yet there is another side to the picture: it is that suggested here. In a word, genius may be the direct product of disease, and failing that disease, the unique individual might have been a mediocre member of the community.

A strange thought! But then we live in a strange world.

FACE VALUE

stepped into the half-light beneath the low, thatched roof, Paterson had to pause while his eyes refocused. When they did so he glimpsed Voyle's girl sneaking off like a shadow, and Voyle, wearing only a lava-lava about his waist, sprawling in a long chair. His left arm was in a sling, and, of course, he had been drinking. He stared truculently at his caller.

"Now, then, Voyle, I want to talk to you." The District Officer spoke sharply, eyeing the inert, unshaven man with a distaste he made no attempt to conceal.

"Sit down, I want to talk to you, if it comes to that."

Paterson perched on the edge of a rickety chair. The dirt of the hut precluded any thought of lounging.

"This is serious," he began in warning.

"Damned serious!" snarled Voyle. "My arm's been broke by a madman, and if it wasn't for the Padre I might have died of it. You're the D.O. What are you going to do?"

"I know my duty. You can leave that to me. Tim Downey says you stole his pearl."

"Didn't!" came the sulky answer. "He says you admitted to him you did."

"Then he's a liar. Oh, I know you think I'm scum and all the rest of it. You'd be glad to have the chance to hunt me out of here."

"I would," Paterson admitted unequivocally.

"Well, this isn't it. I've not done a thing."

"You admitted stealing the pearl—you shot him."

"That's what you'd like to think happened. You'd just love that to be it, wouldn't you. Mister District Officer? Such a nice little case for you! But you'd better listen to my side."

"Just this: I think the weather and his bit of luck has turned that big stiff's head. He showed me his rotten pearl, and that's all I know about it until he's rushing in here like a bull at a gate, yelling I'd robbed him. I told him straight out that if he thought I was a thief he could go to hell."

"Um," smiled Paterson dryly, "that's not the story he tells."

"I've witnesses that I'm telling the truth."

The District Officer nodded—an unkind nod that suggested Voyle would naturally have all the witnesses he needed.

"And so, to prove your innocence, you shot him?"

"To save my neck. He was as mad as a hatter. Soon as I told him the truth he came at me. I grabbed a gun and warned him off. Too crazy to care! It'd have been murder if I hadn't let him have it. I fired low, but in the rough house hit him in the thigh. He snapped my arm like it was a match. Mad as a dog, I swear it. You can't argue with a mad dog. I gave him one with the butt, and knocked him stiff. Then I had him carted back to his own place. Wish I'd finished off the job—that's what I wish—the flaming lunatic."

His indignation seemed to be authentic, but Paterson knew it was easy—no matter what the truth—to persuade oneself that all the blame lay on the other fellow. Swiftly he tried to winnow out the truth. The pearl represented a fortune; the surly tricks Voyle had played on the natives for paltry gains came to mind.

"Got you thinking, eh?"

"It has. But all my thinking only gets me one way."

"Does it now?"

"Yes, it makes me more certain that you're a thief, Voyle, and very near a murderer."

The cool words stung Voyle out of his pose of mocking confidence. He stumbled from the chair, and, as he did so, whipped a revolver from beneath his wicker arm. Unsteady yet taut, he looked like a cornered rat braced on its hind legs.

"By God!" he swore, "I've stood enough of this, and I'll stand no more. You all think you can spit on Voyle—and say what you like about him. Well, you can't see? I'm through—fed up."

Paterson had none of the reckless courage of the man whose life has never been in danger. Chill fear ran through him. He knew that his position was desperate, and that the next thunder-choked minute might bring him death.

Inspiration flashed to him. He nodded a cheerful, ironical greeting and remarked, "Hallo, Padre, in the nick of time!"

The words were addressed to someone standing just outside the hut behind Voyle. Instinctively, inevitably, the beachcomber swung about, and in that second Paterson sprang. His fingers closed on the thin wrist, and Voyle, one arm disabled, could offer no real resistance. A sharp jerk, and Paterson stepped back, the butt sweaty in his palm.

"And now, what about it?"

Voyle gave a little gasping sob of dismay. He glanced again at the spot where the Padre should have been, and then looked back at Paterson, shamefaced yet

JERUSALEM TO PETRA IN A LIGHT CAR

Petra has always been considered as one of the least accessible places in the Near East, situated as it is in the desert of Trans-Jordan, almost 250 miles from Jerusalem.

Therefore it has come as a surprise to motorists in that area to learn that the trip has been made in a light car. Previously it had been believed that the arduous journey called for "the strongest of large automobiles with ample supplies of spare parts" (vide the Palestine Post). The light car concerned—a Hillman Minx—proved itself capable of competing with large uneconomical cars at a fraction of the cost since only 15-gallons of fuel and a negligible amount of oil were consumed.

The Minx was driven by Mr. Maude, of Jerusalem, who reported that she ran faultlessly, and that the only trouble en route was a puncture.

vicious. Paterson smiled.

"You've wrecked things properly, Voyle. Apart from anything else, you're for it now. I arrest you. This is the closed season for district officers. You're coming with me."

"Damn you!" raged Voyle, shuffling from one bare foot to the other. Suddenly, however, the knowledge of defeat swept over him, and he fell on his knees, protesting his innocence. "Get up, man, and stop making an exhibition of yourself," Paterson rapped out. "You make me tired. Get up. We'll go to the Padre's first to hear what he has to say, and then I'll take you off to the boat. And while we're about it I advise you to thank about that pearl. You've hidden it, of course, but it might pay you to find it. Get up, and no funny business."

The revolver emphasised the warning. Voyle pulled on a battered straw hat and slouched away. Paterson, on his heels, was alert, for he had had forgotten Voyle's woman. She might attempt something silly. He saw no sign of her, however, and concluded that she had forsaken her man. He did not blame her. The only marvel was that was that the poor devil had any interest in the white ruff-ruff who took up with them. He slipped the revolver into his pocket, but still held it.

In silence they passed down to the beach and turned towards the mission house, where an uneasy boy explained that his master had gone round the coast to Simindou, but would be back shortly as his canoe had been sighted off the point. Paterson signed to his prisoner to go up to the veranda, and there they sat and waited in morose silence.

Lightning ripped the sky, and the thunder at last smashed the globe of quiet. Then, as if a sluice had burst, the rain came. It hammered on the thatch and built a shimmering, steely wall about the veranda.

Padre Bannerman floundered up the steps like a seal emerging from the sea. His all-skins shone and streamed; his black beard was plastered down in straggling whisks. Water poured from him.

"Oh, dear, I thought I'd race it!" The mild exclamation came oddly from such a giant, but it was Bannerman's single and universal substitute for profanity—which he abhorred. The boy removed his coat, and, wiping his eyes, the missionary discovered his visitors. "So?" The rising infection told that he understood. His lips pursed and he nodded, glancing from one to the other. "Excuse me one moment." He passed into the house.

"No hurry, Padre." "It's a shame, that's what it is," Voyle broke out, abruptly. "Talk about 'give a dog a bad name.' Even the Padre reckons I'm guilty. Even if I had the stinking pearl didn't that fit robber steal it from Tana? Of course, he did! He hasn't enough in his whole store to pay a hundredth part of what it's worth. But that's legal robbery, of course. Church and State bless that!" He spat on the boards.

"It's Downey's property, and you can't get away from that. I'm not here to rearrange the social system, but to administer the law. I hope you're making-up your mind to hand that pearl over."

"I never said I could work miracles."

"The evidence is too strong, Voyle."

"Evidence! Evidence!" stormed the prisoner, above the clamour of the rain. "Many an innocent man's been hanged on evidence like you've got against me."

"And many a guilty," said Paterson, but something of that doubt at the back of his mind slipped into his voice.

The Padre reappeared, draping a faded dressing-gown about him. His worn slippers sloped on the boards; his wide and kindly eyes were grave.

"You visit's opportune, Paterson. I gather you've heard about our little upheaval."

"I've heard right enough. You were there when the pearl vanished, Padre. See anybody else beside the three of you?"

"No one."

"You didn't steal it, I suppose," smiled the District Officer.

Bannerman answered, seriously: "No, Paterson, I did not steal it."

"I went to get Voyle's side of the affair, and he'd have shot me if I hadn't been too quick for him."

He produced the revolver.

"Very foolish of him."

"You be foolish if you'd been persecuted the way I've been—had your arm broken—been afraid for your life—been bullied and called a thief and a murderer when all the time you're never done a cursed thing."

"True!" Bannerman stroked his beard. "If placed in that position

I should certainly be peevish."

"How I hate you all!" snarled Voyle, and erupted into a torrent of foul abuse.

"Oh, shut up, Voyle, you dirty-mouthed beast!" said Paterson. "Come on, we'll be going."

To the Padre: "Bit of a nuisance this rain, but it can't be helped."

"At least I can lend you a couple of all-skins," Bannerman offered. He called a boy, who brought the coats, and, with a proper respect for authority gave the dry one to the Government man.

Paterson pulled on the crackling garment, and thrust the revolver into the pocket. "Hold on," he said, "something of yours here."

He pulled out a box of matches and proffered it to its owner with the mechanical shake that always accompanies the movement.

Instead of the rattle of matches they heard a sound like a pen being bounced about.

"Hullo?"

Voyle rose from his chair as if drawn by a wire, and the Padre's eyes grew round.

Paterson, fingers unsteady, pushed the box open. Within the pearl glimmered—a breathtaking globe cut from the sky of dawn.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" gasped the Padre.

Voyle broke into a neigh of laughter—horrible laughter that wracked and shook him.

"This is altogether too terrible!" cried the Padre. "I had that coat on. I was smoking at Downey's. No doubt my match-box was on the table. I could almost fancy I put it there because it was empty."

When the lightning struck I suppose from force of habit I picked up a box and slipped it into my pocket—the wrong box—leaving the empty one. Naturally, we all use the same matches here—the brand Downey stocks. I've not happened to wear the coat since. What can I say?"

"Three of us nearly killed—and Voyle here under unjust suspicion," grumbled the young and abashed representative of justice.

He turned his attention to Voyle. The man's expression baffled him. Certainly the recovery had come as a shock to him, yet he showed no relief. He had risen and stood glaring at the match-box in a sultry stupor. Instinctively Paterson's fingers tightened on it.

"Oh, dear, Voyle," said the Padre lugubriously, "what apology—what restitution—can I make?"

"Yes, I'm—terribly—sorry,—too," Voyle. A bad show. But, you see the evidence?"

The beachcomber roused himself and glanced at them both. "Evidence!" he spat. "Ought to be ashamed to say the word. Perhaps I'm not under arrest now, eh?"

"Of course not!"

The Padre would have plunged into further professions of repentance, but Voyle cut him short with an angry gesture.

"Yes, you can be merciful now, can't you, you old hypocrite? Well, I don't want your mercy. Keep it!" He turned on his heel and left them. At the foot of the steps he paused to shout back, "And as for you, Mr. Jack-in-office, you'll hear more of this."

He spoke the truth. Kuahoni, father of Voyle's girl, brought them further tidings that night when the three of them were sitting on Tim Downey's verandah discussing the affair.

Kuahoni had the simple, expressionless, withered face of a babe born at the age of 100 years. He squatted on his shanks before them.

"The white man Voyle was wrath against my daughter," he intoned in the dialect, "and yet all because of her love for him. She did not wish the Government to put him in jail for stealing the pearl. She knew where he had hidden it. She came to the mission-house while you talked, entered at the back, and put the pearl into the coat pocket. This she did because she knew it was better to lose the pearl than her man. On his homecoming his wrath was terrible, for he believed that he could have tricked you. He bent her. He would have killed her and been shamefully hanged by the Government had she not killed him with a clean knife out of her love. That being done she went swimming to the edge of the world, and she is now dead. All is finished as to these twain."

The slightest movement of his parchment hands dismissed them into the sea of death.

"Will the Government give me the property that was Voyle's, and pay me pigs for the daughter I have lost through the coming of the Government man?"

'ASPRO' as a GARGLE for SORE THROATS

THERE are few people throughout the world who are not acquainted with the virtues of "ASPRO" in relieving pain—stopping Colds—Flu and Rheumatic attacks at inception. Many, however, do not know how to use "ASPRO" as a gargle for Sore Throats. Two "ASPRO" Tablets in four tablespoonfuls of water make a very effective gargle, acting as a powerful antiseptic for Sore Throats because of its natural germicidal qualities. The reason why "ASPRO" has such quick action in banishing so many varied complaints is because, after ingestion in the system, it is a powerful germicide and solvent of uric acid, is an anti-Pyretic or fever destroyer and is antiseptic—anti-periodic and anti-fermentative.

5 MINUTES

FOR RELIEF WITH 'ASPRO'

There is nothing indefinite about "ASPRO." Its service is QUICK—safe, effective and definite. It gives you relief in 5 to 10 minutes and then goes on to dispel or dissolve the cause of the pain, allowing Nature to effect its own cure. Furthermore, you get no harmful after-effects from "ASPRO," as it is speedily eliminated from the system a few hours after being taken. It neither dopes, deadens nor drugs.

'ASPRO' BRINGS SWEET SLEEP TO THE SLEEPLESS

There are many thousands of people who now have sweet peaceful sleep, who hitherto hardly knew the meaning of a period of restfulness. "ASPRO" has brought about the transformation by its sweet soothing influence on the nerves, and breaking up of local feverish conditions. Two tablets before retiring is the usual dose.

HOW TO GIVE 'ASPRO' TO CHILDREN

Two simple methods of giving "ASPRO" to the kiddies are: (a) with a little milk or (b) break the tablet up and administer in a teaspoonful of juice. The dosage is: Children 3 to 6 years, 1/4 tablet; 6 to 14 years, 1 tablet; 14 to 16 years 1 1/2 tablets. "ASPRO" like any other medicine should not be given to babies under 3 years of age without medical advice.

THE 'HYGIENIC' SANTAPE PACKING METHOD EXPLAINED.

THE 'SANTAPE' METHOD EXPLAINED

The plant consists of the most up-to-date and efficient mechanical apparatus, including a number of "SANTAPE" machines, which seal the tablets hygienically in specially prepared wax paper compartments.

This system is known as the modern 'HYGIENIC' "SANTAPE" method of packing, and because of its thorough protective properties, ensures that "ASPRO" retains its original high standard of purity. This should serve to commend "ASPRO" to all who appreciate the absolute necessity of purity in medicine.

The wonderful human-like "SANTAPE" machines are one of the most ingenious and highly developed engineering triumphs of modern times. The machines wrap the tablet with unerring regularity in waxed paper, divide the paper into separate compartments, crimp each compartment so that no air can find access to the tablet, fold the tapes, and finally pass them through sprays of paraffin wax, effectively sealing the "SANTAPE," and rendering the tablets proof against damp, moisture and any form of contamination.

ELIMINATION OF HANDLING

The "SANTAPE" method of packing has a distinct advantage over the crude and obsolete system of hand packing. At no time during the process of manufacturing, compressing and packing, do "ASPRO" Tablets come in contact with the human hand, therefore, contamination from this source is entirely prevented, the source reaching the consumer in the same perfect hygienic state as when they left the tableting machines.

What 'ASPRO' Does:

- 1 It Stops Violent Head aches in 5 to 10 minutes
- 2 It Brings Sweet Sleep to the Sleepless
- 3 It Relieves Rheumatism on a day
- 4 It Relieves Children's Growing Pains
- 5 It Saves many a Sound Tooth by Removing Toothache
- 6 It Brings Relief without causing sickness, indigestion or a craving.
- 7 It Stops Pain without harming the Heart
- 8 It soothes away Irritability
- 9 A hot lemon drink with 2 or 3 "ASPRO" Tablets will smash up a Cold or Flu attack in one night.
- 10 It Reduces Temperature in 5 minutes.
- 11 It can be taken at any time, in Train, Home, at Home, at Business—anywhere—everywhere.
- 12 It gives the greatest relief ever known to women at their times of periodical depression.
- 13 It Stops the Ill After-Effects of Alcohol.
- 14 It relieves Dengue and Malaria by reducing the fever.
- 15 As a Gargle, "ASPRO" is wonderful for Sore Throats, Tonsillitis, etc.

DOG BEATEN TO DEATH

Gardener Given Animal By Mrs. Morely.

BECAUSE CHILD WAS BITTEN

Pleading guilty to a charge of maliciously killing a dog at the Central Police Court yesterday morning, Lam Chin, a vegetable gardener, stated that the dog had killed a chicken and he was afraid that it would turn on him.

Inspector Rodger said that the former owner of the dog, Mrs. Morley, of 13 Dragon Terrace, Bay View, had given the animal to the defendant because it had bitten her child. He stated that the defendant tied the dog up and beat it to death with a bamboo pole.

Mr. Hamilton, the Magistrate, remanded the defendant on bail of $50 and asked if eye-witnesses of the incident could be obtained. He considered that the dog should have been sent to the Dog's Home in the first place when it bit the child.

TREASURY BILLS ISSUE.

$38,000,000 Allotted.

London, Yesterday. A total of $38,000,000 was applied for in yesterday's tenders for 40,000,000 Treasury bills. The amount allotted in bills at three months was $38,000,000.

The average rate per cent. was 17/9.01d., as compared with 17/9.99d a week ago.—British Wireless Service.

Ho Tung Chung, a Chinese woman residing on the second floor of No. 10 Chung-Sau Street, was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital last night at 10 p.m., suffering from opium poisoning, which is believed to have been self-administered.
